Young Living Essential Oils is named largest corporate donor in the annual BYU vs. U of U Food Fight drive.

Over 114,342 pounds of food provided to needy Utah families.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Lehi, UT— Community Action Services and Food Bank today announced Young Living Essential Oils as the largest corporate donor in their annual Brigham Young University versus University of Utah Food Fight donation drive. From November 7-24 Young Living Essential Oils raised a total of $6,726 to help fight hunger in Utah ($1,684 in support of the University of Utah and $1,679 in support of Brigham Young University, plus matching contributions). With the funds generated, Community Action Services and Food Bank will be able to provide 114,342 pounds of food to needy families in Utah.

According to Myla Dutton, executive director of Community Action Services and Food Bank, "I was amazed when I found out how much Young Living Essential Oils raised for Community Action Food Bank. The money will go a long way and we will be able to help out so many families." Jim Thomas, Food Bank coordinator, adds, "I think this proves the huge impact that local businesses can have in their community. We are very thankful for Young Living's enthusiasm and generosity."

As part of its mission to inspire individuals to live lives of wellness, purpose, and abundance, Young Living values the role it plays in such worthy community partnerships. Steve Bentley, chief financial officer for Young Living Essential Oils, says, "This event was a lot of fun. No place in our building was safe from blue and red 'marks' as we channeled rivalry passions into a wonderful way to help our own community. Rise and shout, it's Utah by five—at least for this round of donations! We appreciate the local service opportunities that our partnerships with United Way and the Community Action Food Bank provide us."
